

Important Shark Diving Information

The Bahamas offer world class diving with a huge variety of sharks including Hammerhead, Tiger, Lemon, Bull & Caribbean reef sharks. Sharks are wild animals and should be treated with respect. Contrary to popular belief sharks are, of course, simply curious about their environment and the things in it. Though we will do our best to minimise it, there is a very real risk in being in close quarters with them. At Master Liveboards, we pride ourselves on the safety of our divers and therefore we enforce the following rules when diving with sharks in the Bahamas:

- Ensure you are facing the sharks at all times. Of course there will be times when there are sharks on all sides, in which case try to focus on the closest animals.
- In order to maximise shark interactions we will chum the water and offer limited baiting/feeding. Keep your distance from both the bait and from chum boxes.
- Photographers, place your emphasis on the sharks and not on your camera or checking out the photographs you have taken.
- Ensure you do not swim away from any sharks that are in close proximity.
- Do not try and entice the sharks in anyway but wait for them to approach you.
- Maintain a vertical position in the water.
- Minimise any time spent on the surface; when entering the water, descend as quickly as possible.
- When finishing your dive, remain vigilant and surface next to the boat.
- Do not surface next to any sharks.
- Most importantly, please remain vigilant and follow the directions of our dive crew at all times.

In addition to the above, we also require all divers to have the following equipment for diving:

- Dark coloured (black or dark blue) full length wetsuit
- Dark coloured buoyancy aid, hood and gloves - cover as much skin as possible
- Black or dark blue fins

It is not permitted to dive with bright coloured equipment during shark dives.
